

4th Peace & Conflict Talk (PaCT) Towards new orders, towards new cohesion?

The war in Ukraine continues with brute force. Forecasts on hoped-for periods of peace keep disappointing, also because Russia's actions and Russia's actions are becoming more and more uncertain. The uncertainties are increasing. At the same time, European societies are negotiating further strategies and conflicts and are moving closer together in parts.

In a joint exchange, the PaCT tries to determine how to assess the situation and opens up to pressing questions: What violence are we observing? What is the war and violence doing to Ukrainian society? Are there movements where a glimmer of peace shines through, or has everything become even more uncertain? Is a new order being constituted in Europe?

The 4th PaCT has the great honour and pleasure to hear and speak to a colleague from Kiev, and expands the circle of hosts to include the Research Institute Societal Cohesion at Bielefeld University (FGZ)
